Mr. William J. Casey
Director of Central Intelligence
Central Intelligence Agency
Langley, VA

Dear Mr. Casey,

My object in writing to you is to have my letter with a technical proposal reach the appropriate office(s) in the Agency where it can receive the proper attention. Of course, it is also my intention that this will reach you personally, and quite separately from my personal and business interests I want to express my affirmation that despite the flak, I think the Agency is on track and under good leadership.

Now to the main points:

- 1) I have been in the intelligence business (1) for about 10 years and want to work more closely and directly in the domain of national security and intelligence analysis, both personally and because it seems to be the natural direction in which my new business activity is moving.
- 2) Based on research that I have performed in the capacity of scientist and engineer in private industry, I have developed a prototype design for a computerized "intelligence analyst's assistant" which I believe will be of interest to various task forces in the Agency. A particularly strong application area is that of developing and enhancing advance warning capabilities for counter-terrorism programs. Other practical application domains include drug and contraband traffic abatement and early detection/prediction of industrial and/or military espionage.

I would like to discuss the prospects for both:
working in the capacity of a consultant with the Agency (including operative assignments that may match with my skills and background);
developing an AI-based expert system (one that I term IDA (Intelligent Data Analyst) for use by the Agency.

The latter effort would be carried out by me and my partners and staff in my new business (Synertech). Both directions, of course, are not intended to conflict in any way with my responsibilities to my current employer or with their corporate interests (and to my knowledge no such conflict exists at present or in the foreseeable future). At some point, of course, I would envision that my activities with Sguartech will require considerably more of my attention, but at the present things are just beginning to unfold and as you may surmise this business is in an embryonic form. In any case, I am a firm believer in doing everything carefully, legitimately and with utmost propriety with respect to business and research.

At the present I am in the process of preparing preliminary design documents pertaining to the generic structures of the IDA system which will be application-independent. What is my desire at this point is to establish contacts within the Agency with persons that may have an interest in my ideas, in order that meetings and dialogue can be established. From there on it is a matter of determining if there is a need, qualifications, and so forth (2).

I look forward to a response from the appropriate Agency office(s) regarding the considerations I have presented.

Sincerely,

Martin J. Dudziak

(1) Principally in the design of interactive computer systems and applied artificial intelligence research.

(2) A brief resume and other personal information was sent recently to the Office of Personnel in view of the possibility that the type of involvement I seek within the intelligence community may exist only in the capacity of an Agency employee. If that turns out to be the case, I wish to be ready to consider applying for an appropriate position.
